A message from Leo

Balfour Beatty is trusted by customers, business partners and the communities we work with and for to do the right thing, make a difference and to behave responsibly. That includes treating each other fairly, respecting our business partners and caring for our communities – leaving a legacy we can be proud of. It also means being transparent and acting with integrity. Because nothing is harder to win, or easier to lose, than that trust and our reputation for integrity.

Sometimes, doing the right thing is easier said than done. There are times when we need guidance to give us confidence that we are making the right choices. That's not a challenge unique to us in Balfour Beatty; look at any section of society or business and the issues will be the same, but it's why it's important for us to have practical guidance and support to help make the right decisions and to foster a culture that empowers us to do so.

Our Code of Ethics is here to help us do that. Underpinned by the Values and Behaviours in our Cultural Framework, it sets out the principles that should guide our everyday decision-making to ensure that we do the right thing. It is there to support us all in the decisions we make, empowering us to hold each other accountable and challenge when we feel our standards are being undermined or our reputation put at risk.

The Code applies everywhere, every day to everyone who works with and for us. It tells others what they can expect of and from us, the standards we set ourselves in being "Trusted" and how we ensure that our decisions and actions are consistent with our Values. We expect our employees and those who work with us to read it, make sure your teams do the same, and complete the training that supports it.

We encourage everyone to strive to comply with the spirit of the Code and to know that we will always support you if you do the right thing. Each of us has a personal and collective responsibility to make sure our business is worthy of the trust others place in us.

Doing the Right Thing

There is more to “Doing the Right Thing” than just words and complying with the law, which is the minimum requirement we set for ourselves as responsible citizens. Doing the right thing is living and working every day according to the Balfour Beatty Values and Behaviours set out in our Cultural Framework. Doing right, every day. Integrating this simple approach into every aspect of our operations will not only help our financial success, it will also lay the foundation for long term sustainable prosperity.

This Code applies to all our employees, agency workers and business partners around the world. By business partners we mean anyone working with us or on our behalf including joint venture and alliance partners, customers, subcontractors, consultants, agents, representatives, and all suppliers of goods and services.

We are moving from a Code of Conduct to a Code of Ethics because a written document cannot contain all the answers to the ethical issues that we face.

Rather than trying to define rules for how you should respond to a range of specific situations, we are providing a set of principles to guide your approach and signposting further tools and resources where further information is available.

You must be prepared to exercise good judgement and common sense in deciding the right actions to take because of this Code. You should ask questions if you are unclear about any aspect of this Code, or if you are not sure how to respond to an issue that the Code does not address. Failing to comply with the principles in the Code can be very serious including damage to our reputation, significant fines and penalties, and even criminal liability for individuals or Balfour Beatty.

Any failure to comply with this Code or its supporting policies will be investigated, and appropriate action taken. Depending on the circumstances, this may include training, discipline or other corrective action, up to and including termination of employment.

If you manage people, you must ensure that all individuals in your team receive the guidance, resources and training they need to understand what's expected of them. You should:

- > Lead by example with a willingness to help others
- > Live our Values and stand up for what is right

Safety, health and wellbeing

Safety is our licence to operate, which is why it's one of the five Values set out in our Cultural Framework. Nothing is so urgent or important that it cannot be done safely. We believe all incidents, injuries and occupational illnesses are preventable and we commit to a Zero Harm goal of everyone going home safe and healthy every day.

- > We make safety personal: each of us is responsible for working safely, sticking to our standards and Golden Rules to protect the health, safety and wellbeing of those around us
 - » We are all responsible for making sure we are fit for work every day. This means not being under the influence of alcohol or drugs, being well rested, and being physically and mentally fit to perform our jobs
- » We set out people to work safely, ensuring site operatives receive a briefing before starting work
- » We report all unsafe events and conditions
- » We stop work if anything changes, review and re-plan
- > We have a just safety culture: following any incident we will support anyone making a genuine mistake and we will discipline anyone knowingly breaking a rule that puts themselves or others at risk
- > We expect others we work with, our business partners and their supply chain to respect and stick to our health, safety and wellbeing requirements

Employment and inclusion

Each person is unique and we must celebrate that diversity. We value each other and believe all employees have the right to a fair and inclusive working environment of which they are proud to belong, and happy to bring their wholeselves to work. 'Value Everyone' is one of the five Behaviours in our Cultural Framework and we expect all of those who work for and with us to act in a way that supports diversity and helps us embed an inclusive culture.

- > We expect you to offer the same welcome to all employees and business partners, regardless of race, gender identity, nationality, ethnic origin, religion, disability (visible or non-visible), age, sexual orientation, family circumstances or any other difference to ourselves
- > We are committed to supporting people to achieve their best
- > We believe everyone should be treated with dignity and respect. Bullying, intimidation, harassment or micro-aggressions of any kind are not acceptable in our workplace
- > We are committed to observing all local employment laws and standards to create a fair, inclusive, respectful and safe working environment for all. We recognise that people have the right to choose whether to belong to a union and to seek to bargain collectively

Human rights

As set out under the 'Value Everyone' and 'Make a Difference' Behaviours in our Cultural Framework, Balfour Beatty is committed to valuing and respecting each individual and doing the right thing. We are committed to upholding human rights for our people and those who work with us, and we take steps to prevent slavery and human trafficking from taking place in our business and supply chain.

- > We support the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human rights and the International Labour Organisation's standards for child labour and minimum age and respect those rights wherever we operate
- > We expect our business partners to adhere to the same human rights standards as we do
- > We reject any form of child labour or slavery, including forced labour. We work hard to ensure that slavery and child labour are not taking place in our business or supply chain

Spotting the signs of modern slavery

Modern slavery is a serious issue and the construction sector is particularly at risk due to the complex nature of supply chain arrangements and use of subcontract labour. A victim of modern slavery may:

- > Look uneasy, unkept or malnourished
- > Be unsure of their personal address
- > Have a lack of personal belongings
- > Wear the same clothes every day or wear unsuitable clothes to work
- > Be reluctant to talk to others
- > Appear frightened, withdrawn or show signs of physical or psychological abuse
- > Be dropped off at and collected from work, especially at unusual times
- > If you see or suspect signs of modern slavery do not speak directly to the individuals concerned, contact the Speak Up helpline

Sanctions, trade and export controls

Sanctions and trade restrictions are put in place by recognised authorities including the United Nations, United Kingdom and the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) of the US Department of the Treasury. Sanctions are designed to prevent or limit trade with certain countries and/or their nationals, the aim of which is to further various foreign policy and national security objectives. Sanctions can take different forms, including financial sanctions, asset freezes, travel bans and import/export bans.

Balfour Beatty complies with all applicable laws and regulations, including sanctions controlling the import, export and general trading of goods, technology, software and transactions or other dealings with third parties.

The Atelier
Residential
Tower, Dallas

Examples of when we should think about sanctions and export controls:

- > At the earliest stages of planning a new project
- > When travelling overseas on business or with company devices
- > When accessing your home country company IT networks from abroad
- > When considering business in new export markets and/or with potential customers
- > When your role changes or before you start work on a new project

Sustainability

Sustainability is about improving the lives of people around the world today without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. Sustainability is at the heart of how Balfour Beatty operates. We set out full details of our commitment and ambitions to go Beyond Net Zero Carbon, to Generate Zero Waste and to Positively Impact More than 1 Million People in our Sustainability Strategy, Building New Futures.

Our Sustainability Strategy, and the 'Sustainable' Value in our Cultural Framework, should help guide how we behave and the decisions we make in this area:

- > We understand the impact of our activities on the environment through the lifecycle of our operations and always look to first avoid, and then minimise, our impact on the environment, especially on biodiversity
- > We source goods and services responsibly and aim to reduce waste through choosing the right materials for our projects, using less materials and creating value from the materials we no longer need
- > We encourage our employees and business partners to align their Behaviours to the same principles - for example, to turn off equipment when it is not in use and seek to reduce waste
- > We collaborate with the communities in which we operate to understand any impacts from our activities. Through appropriate sustainable development initiatives, we commit to improving the prosperity and wellbeing of individuals and communities in which we operate
- > We support appropriate national and local charities and other non-profit organisations and actively encourage our employees and business partners to give back to the communities we build and serve

Working with others

At Balfour Beatty, 'Value Everyone' is one of the Behaviours set out in our Cultural Framework. We expect everyone to work with our business partners and their supply chain to develop mutually beneficial relationships and treat them with fairness, respect, trust and transparency.

- > We seek to ensure the relationships we build are effective, optimised and deliver enhanced benefits to all parties
- > We always select our supply chain in a fair way, based on skill, competence and best value
- > We only use agents or representatives if we have to and they act to standards consistent with our policies and this Code
- > We commit to developing strong, sustainable relationships based on trust and the Balfour Beatty Values and Behaviours
- > We commit to paying our supply chain in line with our mutually agreed contractual obligations
- > We expect our business partners and their supply chain to apply the same core principles in their operations as those set out in this Code and the Supplier Standards

I-635 East,
Texas

Note that business partners and their supply chain can speak up too. If you have a serious concern that something may not be consistent with this Code, please speak up. We encourage you to raise any concerns or questions you have in confidence, and we value the information that you can provide. We will always support you for doing the right thing. We will not tolerate any retaliation or discrimination of any kind against anyone who has raised something in good faith.

Generally you should first discuss the matter with senior management within your organisation, who in turn should feel confident to raise it with Balfour Beatty senior management.

If you believe the matter cannot be handled appropriately in this way, you can contact our Speak Up helpline on 0800 028 0822 (UK), or 1-866-840-3940 (US).

Company resources

The Group's property and assets are not limited to tangible assets. They include ideas, creations and know-how devised by employees, as well as the image and reputation of Balfour Beatty. At Balfour Beatty we use company property and resources to conduct company business and not for personal gain or unauthorised use.

- > We do not obtain, use or divert company property or financial resources for personal (including family) use or benefit, or for any activity that causes a conflict of interest, or is inappropriate or illegal
- > We apply the same standards to property and equipment in our care belonging to business partners or other third parties
- > We are provided with electronic resources such as email, internet and telephone to help us do our jobs. Personal use is authorised only within reasonable limits
- > We apply the same level of protection and security to company data when we are using our personal devices as we do when using company devices and always comply with our security policies and certifications

Anti-fraud and financial reporting

Maintaining proper and accurate business and financial records is an important part of behaving ethically, ensuring that we remain Trusted and that we do the right thing, as set out in our Cultural Framework.

- > We keep true and accurate records of all financial transactions and record them in a timely manner in our financial records
- > We never deliberately make a false or inaccurate entry in any company records or books of account
- > We are committed to the prevention and detection of fraud and dishonesty. Fraud allegations will be taken seriously and rigorously investigated, with substantiated allegations treated as gross misconduct. Activities that may be a criminal offence, will be reported to the relevant party

Tax evasion

Tax evasion, however small the amount is a crime and it deprives our communities of vital funds needed for effective public services. We never engage in tax evasion, or help anyone else to do so.

- > We fully disclose and pay all our tax liabilities
- > We manage our tax affairs in accordance with our policies and procedures
- > We seek to prevent everyone acting on behalf of Balfour Beatty from facilitating the evasion of tax by anyone else

Anti-fraud and financial reporting:

Q – I've become aware of some potential "irregularities" in expense claims submitted by a senior manager. What should I do?

A – We must always record information accurately, honestly and in line with Balfour Beatty's expense policy. Any discrepancies should be highlighted and resolved, regardless of who they have come from. Always speak up about any concerns that you may have.

Q – Is it OK to transfer costs between project codes to level-up loss-making projects and projects which have some headroom?

A – No, this is fraudulent as you are misrepresenting financial data within the intent to deceive. While the overall cost may stay the same, you are deliberately recording inaccurate data and giving an untrue reflection of the commercial performance of a project.

Confidential information, insider information and share dealing

We protect our shareholders and ourselves by responsibly managing our own and third parties' confidential information including technical information about products or processes, customer lists, pricing, marketing or bidding strategies, non-public financial reports, and information on asset sales, mergers and acquisitions.

- > We are careful about where and with whom we talk about confidential information, and where and how we store it
- > We are careful to ensure we have permission before using third party confidential information for Balfour Beatty's purposes
- > We do not disclose or use any confidential information for personal profit or advantage
- > We do not share inside information with anyone else, including our family and friends
- > We never commit the offence of insider dealing in Balfour Beatty or third parties' securities

Transparent communication

Transparency in communication is an essential part of building and maintaining trust and supporting effective decision-making. That's why we ensure that we communicate openly, honestly and responsibly.

- > We recognise that Balfour Beatty's reputation is one of its key assets and we act both at work and outside work to protect and promote Balfour Beatty's good reputation at all times
- > We are open and honest in our communication, sharing information in a timely and accurate way, and we seek to inform and not mislead
- > We always obtain approval, whatever the medium, before engaging with media, regulators, government agencies or other third parties on Balfour Beatty's behalf
- > We always seek to be transparent and accurate on social media

Data privacy

We respect each person's privacy. We comply with all laws that govern the collection, use and protection of personal information in connection with our business.

- > We only collect and handle the personal information of our colleagues, business partners and associated family or next of kin when needed for legitimate business purposes. We respect the rights each of us has to review, update and correct our information
- > We only share personal data with others when it is lawful and necessary to do so. We ensure that those receiving personal data or processing it understand the importance of privacy and data protection
- > When we work with business partners who may see or process our data, we make clear the importance we place on privacy and the standards we require them to meet

Transparent communication:

Q – I am outraged by a significant world event and want to write a personal tweet about it, but I believe some people, including a number of my colleagues, may find my views controversial. What should I do?

A – Pause. Consider whether, as an employee of Balfour Beatty, your post is likely to have a negative impact on the company's reputation, irrespective of this being a personal opinion. On balance, it's probably best not to tweet as writing in the heat of the moment may not be the best thing to do.

Q – I have just received an invitation to speak at an industry conference. I think it would be a great marketing opportunity for Balfour Beatty. I'd like to accept. Do I need to check with anyone first?

A – Yes, you should discuss the invitation with your manager and the Media Relations team before accepting. Always be careful to seek approvals when you are representing, or seen to be acting as a spokesperson for, Balfour Beatty.

Bribery and corruption

Including gifts and hospitality

Balfour Beatty is committed to the prevention of fraud, corruption and bribery. We do not engage in bribery or corruption of any kind.

Bribery is where someone is persuaded by gifts, payments or other personal favours to behave improperly, to do something that they shouldn't do, or to not do something that they should do. It is also where someone wants a payment, even a small one, to do what they are already required to do (a facilitation payment).

- > We do not offer or pay bribes, no matter where we operate, no matter what the situation is, and no matter who is involved. Nor do we allow our agents or intermediaries to do so

- > We never accept or give bribes. We do not demand or accept any financial or other favour from anyone else for doing our job, or to persuade us to behave improperly, to breach our duties to Balfour Beatty, or as a reward for doing so
- > We never accept or give gifts or hospitality which may influence our or others' business decisions or outcomes
- > If we offer or accept customary gifts and hospitality that are appropriate in nature and value, we accurately record these on the Gifts and Hospitality Register and seek approval where required

Political lobbying

Balfour Beatty is politically neutral, which means that we do not support any particular political party. We engage with political audiences transparently and with integrity.

- > As a company, we do not participate in party political activities or make any political contributions in the UK or EU. We take care about what we say, do or support in the public and political domain
- > In the US, certain political contributions are permitted by law and are an accepted part of local custom and practice. Our US businesses may make political contributions and donations that are appropriate in scale and affiliation with approval by the relevant Managing Director, and in line with processes approved by the Group Chief Executive Officer
- > We all have the right individually to participate in the political process, including by making personal political contributions. However, in doing so, we must maintain a complete separation between any political activities and our professional responsibilities

Examples of bribery, corruption or facilitation payments:

- > Employing an individual primarily because they are the relative of a key business partner
- > Artificially increasing the price of some elements of a tender in order to allow for kickback payments
- > Offering payment to a third party in exchange for sensitive information about a competitor
- > When requested by an official, paying them a small amount of cash to jump the queue, where no such official system exists

Examples of inappropriate gifts and hospitality:

- > Giving a business partner a gift without following our approval process
- > Giving or receiving gifts and hospitality to influence the outcome of a business decision
- > Receiving a lavish gift or hospitality from a business partner who is competing for a contract you will award
- > Receiving repeated gifts and hospitality, each individually within policy limits, from the same business partner

Conflicts of interest

We all have interests outside of our jobs. But when those interests create (or appear to create) a conflict between our personal benefit and Balfour Beatty, we risk losing the trust of our stakeholders. Accordingly, we must always ensure our personal activities, interests and relationships do not conflict or appear to conflict with our responsibilities at Balfour Beatty.

- > We use good judgement to avoid situations where there may be, or even appear to be, a conflict of interest

- > We report any actual or potential conflict of interest. Where a conflict cannot be avoided we manage it appropriately and transparently, taking advice from other colleagues
- > We do not allow ourselves to obtain any undeclared personal advantage through our position or role within Balfour Beatty

Hinkley Point C,
Somerset

Conflicts of interest:

Q – Can I appoint or place an order with a supplier I know personally?

A – You cannot use your position in Balfour Beatty to the advantage of someone you know. The most important thing to do is register this relationship on the Conflicts of Interest Register and speak to the Ethics team as soon as possible, so a decision can be made as to whether there is a conflict.

Q – Can someone I have a close relationship with apply for a job with us?

A – As long as you believe the individual has the skills, qualifications and personal attributes required for the role then they may apply for the role, provided that you are not in a position to influence the decision to employ them and that you will not be their manager or supervisor. You should also ensure you disclose your relationship when recommending the individual for the role to avoid any misconceptions, and log the matter on the Conflicts of Interest Register if the role is offered and accepted.

Common examples of conflicts of interest:

- > Giving preferential treatment to relatives and close friends, often by hiring them
- > Having a relationship with someone you supervise at work
- > Appointing a business partner or supplier who is connected to you through friends or family
- > Having financial interests in business partners, suppliers or competitors (excluding holdings of less than 1% in public companies)
- > Other outside employment or activity that is detrimental to the commercial interests of Balfour Beatty or can impact your ability to perform your job effectively

Fair competition

As part of being 'Trusted' to deliver on our promises and do the right thing, we compete ethically and lawfully in all our activities.

- > We believe in fair and free competition. We compete ethically and respect all applicable competition and antitrust laws wherever we operate
- > We do not obtain or use information about our competitors, business partners or customers which has been obtained by illegal or disreputable means
- > When we interact with competitors or potential competitors, we do not share confidential information which may impact how we all compete

Fair competition:

Q – I have been invited by a customer to attend a sports event. It is likely that some of Balfour Beatty's competitors will be present. Can I attend?

A – Yes, it is acceptable to attend but be careful about what you discuss with our competitors. General discussions and expressions of opinion about the market outlook or conditions affecting business partners are allowed provided they would not influence future conduct. Discussions regarding health and safety issues and potential future legislation are also fine. However, you should avoid discussing matters which could be of any commercial benefit to competitors.

Q – My colleague used to work for a competitor. She showed me a file on her laptop which contained her old employer's bidding strategy for the next year. What should I do?

A – Explain that it is not appropriate for you or anyone at Balfour Beatty to have access to a competitor's commercially sensitive information. Report this to a member of the Balfour Beatty Legal team immediately, and do not make any notes on what you saw or disclose any of the details to anyone else at Balfour Beatty.

Q – We are discussing whether to approach a company which might otherwise be a competitor on a tender to form a joint venture to bid. It is suggested that this will benefit our chances of winning the contract rather than bidding against them. We can also gain knowledge of commercial matters to strengthen Balfour Beatty's position in future bids. Should I be concerned?

A – Yes. It is a breach of competition law to seek to reduce competition or exchange commercial information. The only legal grounds for bidding in joint venture are to acquire necessary capacity or expertise, or to manage and spread risk as compared to bidding alone. Commercial information about joint venture partners must be ring-fenced and not used by Balfour Beatty outside the joint venture project.

The four c's

Decision making tree

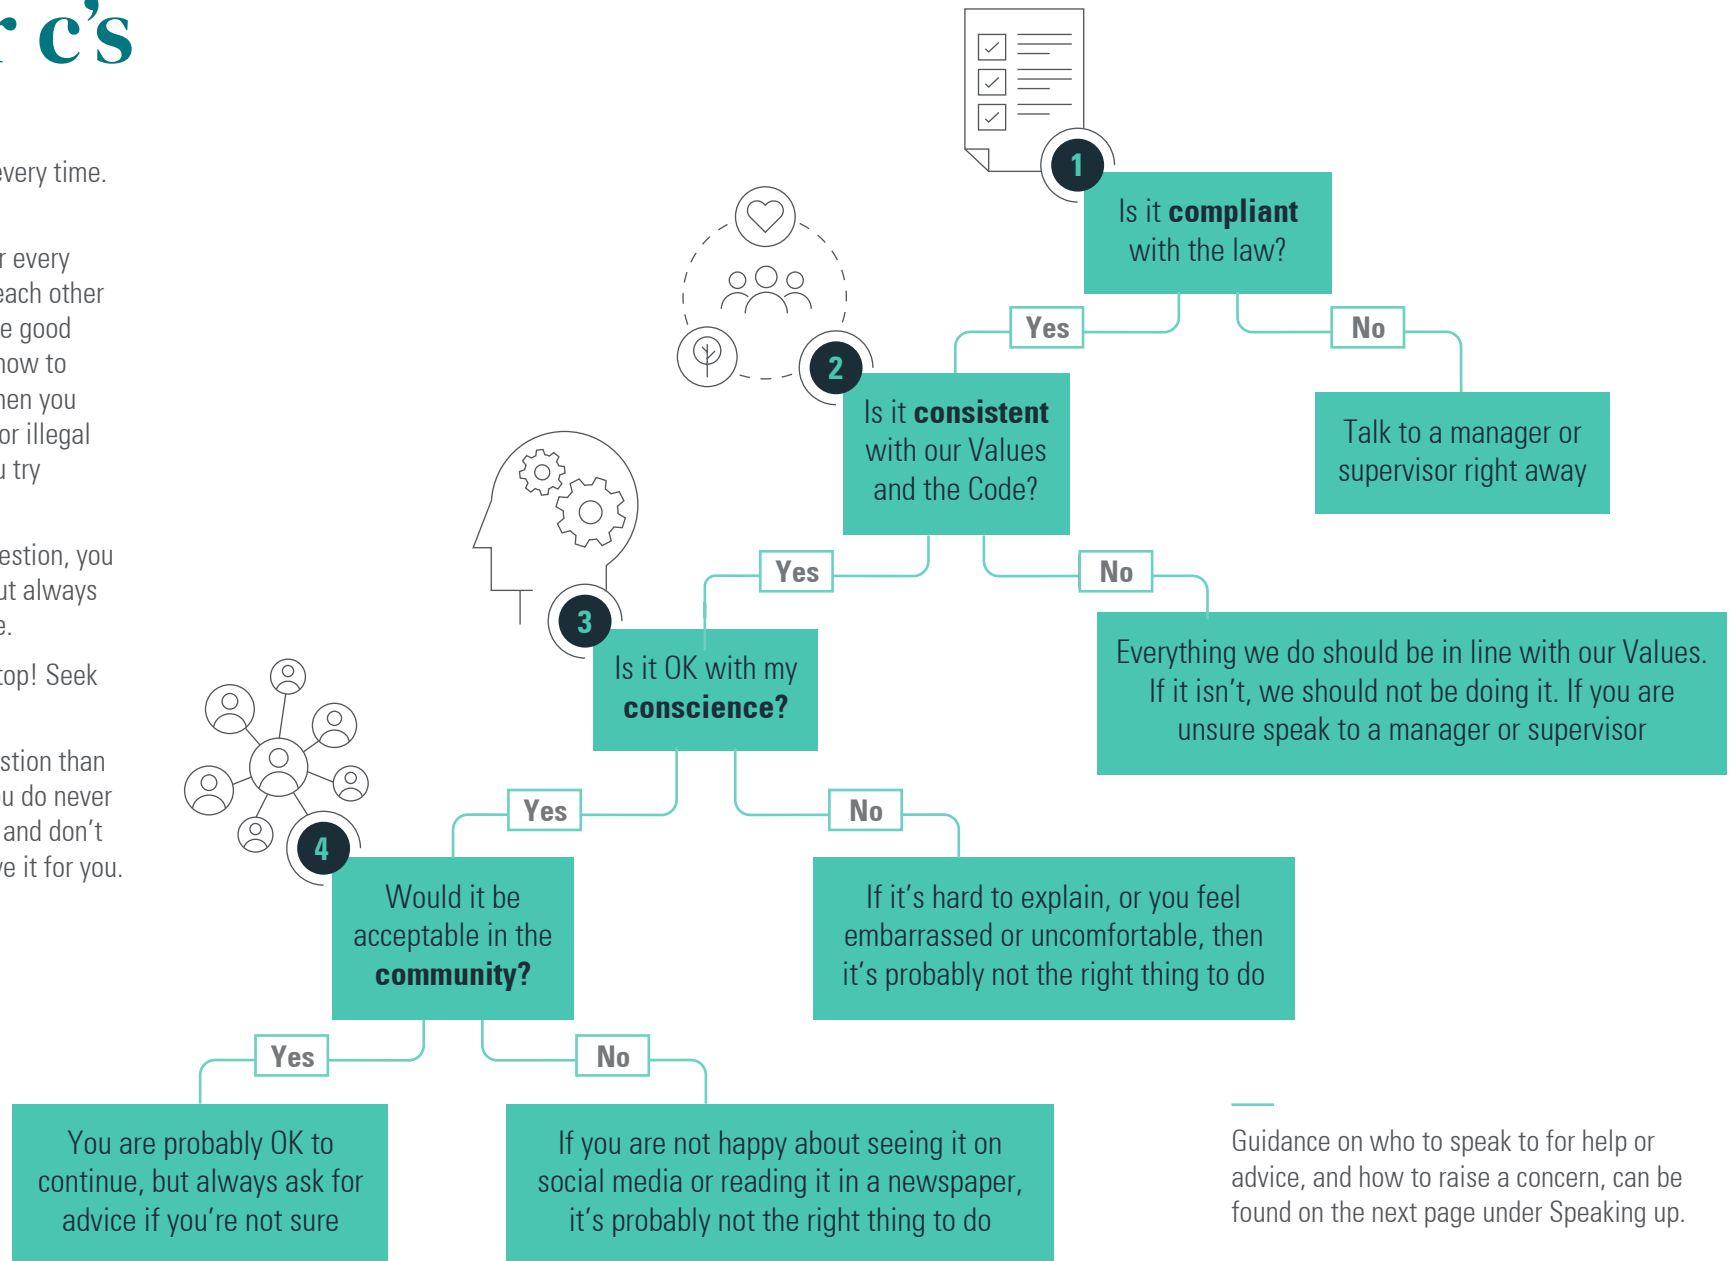

We can all do the right thing, every time.
No exceptions.

Because no guidance can cover every possible situation, we rely on each other to apply common sense and use good judgment. To help you assess how to act in any given situation or when you see or hear possible unethical or illegal behaviour, we suggest that you try applying the "four c's".

If the answer is yes to each question, you are probably OK to continue, but always ask for advice if you're not sure.

If the answer is no/not sure. Stop! Seek advice and guidance.

It is always better to ask a question than guess an answer. Whatever you do never try to solve the problem alone, and don't assume someone else will solve it for you.

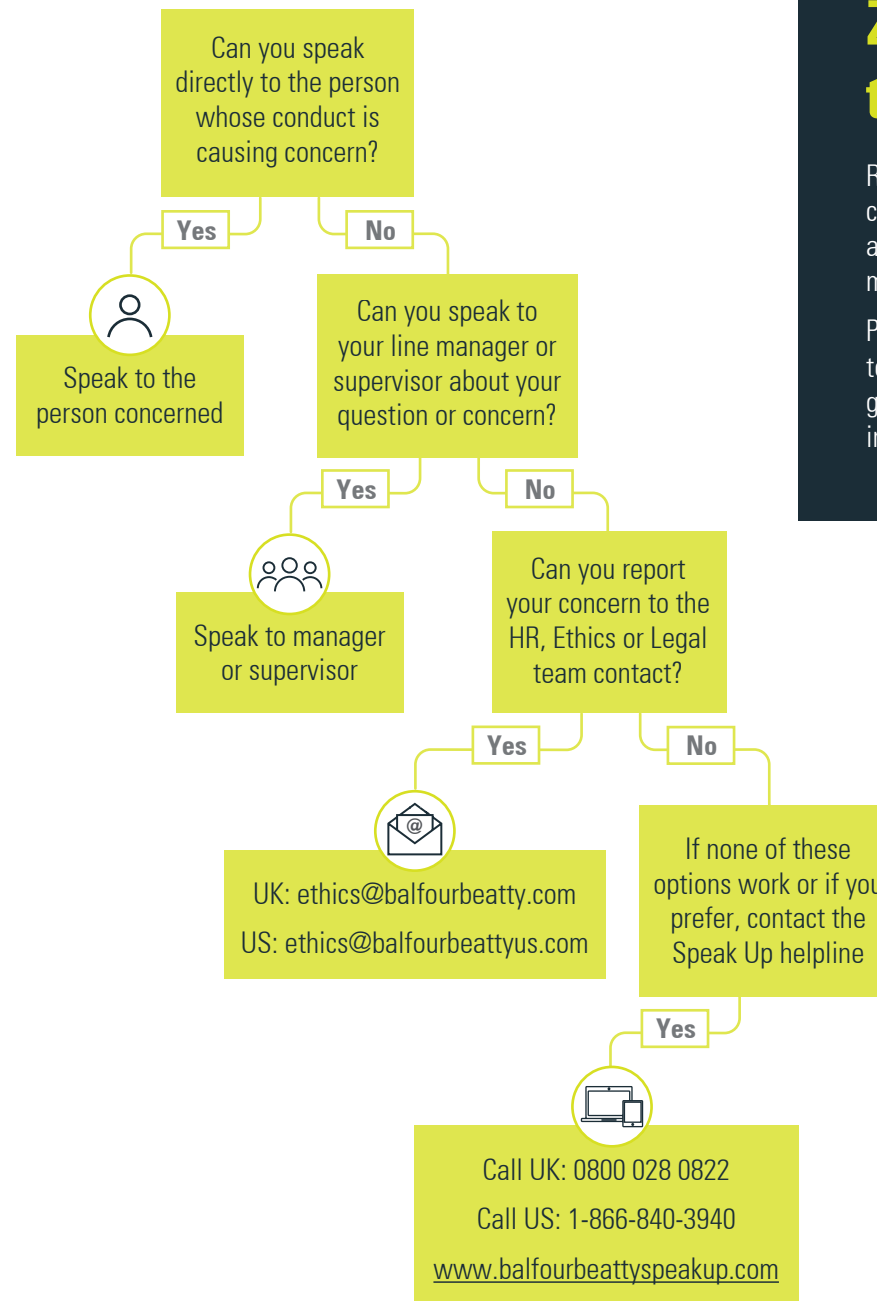

Speaking up

Help, advice and raising concerns

We all need to know and understand the legal and regulatory requirements that apply to our business. While we don't expect you to be an expert, we do expect that all employees know when to ask questions to determine how to do the right thing. For any questions on compliance with the law or regulations, contact a member of Ethics or Legal teams. Questions can also be raised anonymously and confidentially via "Ask A Question" on the www.balfourbeattyspeakup.com website.

Every situation is different and no Code, policy or standard can cover everything. If you are ever in any doubt about how to do the right thing, you can speak up, confident in the knowledge that your concerns will be looked into and addressed. Issues and concerns can be reported anonymously, or if you choose to identify yourself, you can request that your identity be kept confidential. If you are unsure how best to speak up you can follow the steps opposite:

We all need guidance in some situations – never be afraid to ask for help

Zero tolerance to retaliation

Raising a concern or speaking up can take courage, and sometimes what holds us back is a fear of the reaction from our colleagues and managers.

Please be assured that Balfour Beatty will not tolerate any reprisal against anyone who, in good faith, reports a problem or assists an investigation.
